SYNAXIS OF PANAGIA KOUTSOURIOTISSA IN ERATEINI OF PHOCIS.

A seventeenth-century monk of the Archangels Monastery in Aigio would see a light in the same spot in the distance that was unusual in brilliance and vividness. Later this monk saw the Panagia in his dream, and she told him, “At exactly the spot where you see the light is my icon, and I want you to dwell there.” He acted quickly and traveled to where he had seen the light. He climbed down a steep, rocky cliff about 800 meters above sea level, near the village of Amygdalis Doridos. There he saw a cave with a tree at its entrance. In the hollow of the tree, was the icon of the Panagia. He built a chapel inside the cave that still exists, and there placed the holy and wonderworking icon. It attracted many pilgrims, and it became known as the Panagia Koutsouriotissa, named after the hollow trunk, where the icon was found. In 1670 a church was built on top of the hill, with cells around it, which later became a monastery. In 1825 it was destroyed by the Turks and was rebuilt ten years later. The people of that area would flee to the monastery for protection from their enemies. An earthquake damaged the monastery in 1995, but a beautiful church was rebuilt. This icon is celebrated on four separate dates in the Church calendar.

On Today's Gospel Readings

“Due to the way the calendar falls, today we heard two gospel lessons, both from St. Luke. The first (Lk. 2:22-40) recounts the Presentation of Jesus in the temple 40 days after his birth. This was the custom of the Jewish people regarding the first-born son.

The second reading (Lk. 19:1-10) tells of Zacchaeus, a man who desired to see Jesus, but because of the crowd, he had to climb a tree to do so. We hear this reading on the 5th Sunday before Great Lent to remind us that we must desire to use the forthcoming Lenten season for our spiritual growth.”
